May: A Time of Renewal, Courage, and Living Faith

As May unfolds, we step fully into the season of renewal. The blossoms are no longer tentative – they are bold, alive, and expressive. In the same way, this is a time when our faith is not meant to remain quiet or hidden, but lived – gently, steadily, and with courage.

In the life of the Serbian Orthodox Church, this period carries the light of Pascha forward. The joy of the Resurrection is not a single day – it is away of living. We are reminded that even after the darkest suffering, life prevails. This message is deeply woven into Serbian history, where faith has endured though hardships, exile, and struggle, yet continues to stand – rooted and unshaken.

May often brings us into remembrance of great spiritual strength through the lives of saints who walked before us. Among them, we reflect on Saint Vasilije Ostroski, whose feast day (May 12) is one of the most beloved in our tradition. His life reminds us that holiness is not found in comfort, but in steadfast trust in God, even in the most difficult circumstances. Pilgrims still travel to Ostrog Monastery carved into the rock, seeking healing, hope, and peace – just as people have done for centuries.

We also remember Saint Sava, the foundation of Serbian spiritual identity, whose legacy continues to guide us. His teachings were not only about faith, but about building a life of humility, wisdom, and service to others. In a world that often feels rushed and uncertain, his example invites us to slow down and return to what truly matters.

This month is also an invitation to examine our inner life. Just as the earth is alive and growing, we are called to nurture what is within us:

- patience instead of urgency
- prayer instead of worry
- kindness instead of judgement

Even small acts – a quiet prayer in the morning, lighting a candle, preparing a single meal with care – become ways of living our faith daily.

Serbian tradition has always beautifully intertwined faith, family, and the rhythms of nature. May is a time to gather, to share meals, and to remember that joy is found in simplicity – in conversation, in presence, and in gratitude.

If this season feels heavy for any reason, take heart: renewal doesn't rush. Growth happens quietly, often unseen at first. What matters is staying rooted – in faith, in love and in hope.

May this month bring you peace in your home, strength in your heart, and quiet assurance that you are never walking alone.

HELP NEEDED
For one of our own
Desanka

Hi, my name is Desanka, and I need a kidney transplant. I live in Greenfield, Wisconsin, and while I am single with no children of my own, my family means everything to me. I am incredibly blessed to be an aunt to my amazing niece and nephew, they truly mean the world to me. Our bond has been shaped through both joyful moments and challenges. At one point, while I was facing my own health struggles, my niece was also going through her own health struggles. Walking through that time together brought us even closer. I treasure the simple, beautiful moments we've shared over the years, going to sporting events, creating art, cooking meals together, laughing until our sides hurt, and just being silly. Those memories are some of my greatest gifts.

These days, I continue to hold onto those moments in new ways, painting with my four-year-old godson, experimenting with new recipes in the kitchen with my nephew.

In 2017, my family experienced a heartbreaking loss when my niece passed away at just 21 years old. That loss changed me deeply, and it continues to remind me how precious time with loved ones really is.

For most of my life, I have worked in retail, and for the past six years, I have been with Lululemon. I enjoy connecting with people and helping bring a little joy into their day of retail therapy. Outside of work, I love baking, cooking, and entertaining, hosting lunches and dinner parties, gathering with friends, and exploring new restaurants and diverse types of cuisine.

In 2022, after struggling with kidney stones, I received a living donor kidney transplant. It was an incredible gift, one that gave me my life back, and I will always be grateful. Unfortunately, in 2025, my body began to reject that kidney, and my health has been declining since.

Although my kidney disease is worsening, I have not required dialysis yet. I am hoping to receive a kidney transplant before dialysis is necessary.

“...and they begged him not to command them to go into the abyss” (Luke 8:26-39)

Possession by the devil is, unfortunately, a possible state of man's sinful weakness. Arbitrarily distanced from God's Grace, man easily follows various deceptions, becoming a slave to various passions and “drives” or natural impulses. However, we should immediately emphasize that this is not about the omnipotence or the great power of the evil demon. But here it is about man's weakness by which he is seduced so that he opens the door to the evil demon who attacks and knocks him down. He makes himself at home in the fallen man, but it is not his final victory; it is only the great fall of man. It is true that he obeys and serves, but he cannot do that for an infinite amount of time. His weakness is quickly manifested and in no time he gives in and shows all his cowardice. The evangelical example of the “Gadarina besomuchnik” is the best confirmation of all this. This is where satanic power is shown in the worst possible way, which through many demons takes hold of a person, driving him to madness. However, that false satanic force disappears at the moment of meeting the One who gives life, Christ. Why is Christ recognized by demons? Do they believe in him? The apostle testifies that “the devils believe and tremble” (James 2:19), but we understand that faith as superstition in the throws of death. In this sense, we see and understand the alarm of the devil's rebuttal: “What do you have to do with us, Jesus, Son of the Most High? Please do not torment us...and they begged him not to command them to go into the abyss” . (Luke 8:28-31).

The devil believes and prays. He believes, but does not confess; that is why he remains in his lawlessness. He is afraid of pain and that's why he loves Him. He will not go into the abyss. All his weakness and incompetence are reflected here. He arbitrarily distanced himself from Meaning, and that is why he now begs not to be banished to the place where meaninglessness is ... the abyss. But why doesn't he ask for help? Simply because of arbitrary ignorance! Having become foolish with ignorance, he first blackmails by trying to determine the time, the place, and the way of the saving action of the One who is above all conditions and limitations. So when he saw the weakness of his insolence, he began to plead, not for salvation, but for immediate deliverance. It is the nonsense of a short goal and a quick achievement. Recognizing his impotence and weakness of the fallen angel/demon, let's arm ourselves with the power of God's love to overcome it all. Let us unite with Christ. Christ casts the demon out of man by the power of His humane love. A demon cannot stand the encounter with Christ's divine love. The demon looks on and trembles. Why, then, if Christ is stronger, does He not destroy them, but allows them to enter the herd of swine? This is not about weakness and indulgence, but about not denying them their freedom, even though they show ill will. Christ does not respond to open demonic opposition to God with hatred and revenge, but with a salutary effect He frees the sick man from demonic addiction and thus defeats the cause of that disease - the demon— who surrenders helplessly. That is why you should not ask why Christ did not deal with the demon more harshly. Demons will not accept Christ's good victory. They will not, because they are steeped in their wickedness. To defeat everyone and not to be defeated by anyone is their meaning. In the end, as a conclusion, we can say:

“Let's beware of demonic cunning, let's not stay even for a moment in its embrace, Listen to Christ, who with His love conquers everything, including demonic lies.”
